

ABSTRACT

A system and method for storing samples. The system can store samples from multiple manufacturing locations in a single warehouse or facility. A database can store information concerning the characteristics of the samples where the samples are given identification numbers and other information unique to each sample.